PRINTED BY SAM. HARRIS

The Newtown Congregational Church, for the purpose of assisting in the renovating of the church, was open ten days afternoon by the Mayors of Sydney, Lady in the schoolroom adjoining the church. Despite the severity of the weather there was a large gathering of people to the church, the Rev. Warlow Davies, M. a number of the ladies of the congregation received the guests. As Miss (Mrs.)

The Rev. Wavlo Davies presided, and opened the proceedings by remarking that although they were unfortunate in having such a downfall of rain as far as the sale was concerned, which might give their inconvenience and perhaps temporary loss, yet he felt

The Chairman then explained the objects of the union. He said it was not necessary, he was quite sure, that should say one word in defence of efforts like the present sale of work conducted as they had been in the past.

But he might be permitted for a moment to say that the work which he objects to which the proceeds of the present work were to be devoted, viz., the renovation of the church, about 17 years ago the congregation spent from $20,000 to $3000 in enlarging their site and church, improving their surroundings, and general renovations. The whole large amount of money was raised at the time. The congregation was enabled to do by the generosity of

They had been in the district since three many people of his age, as was true of almost every district. But he was glad to see that their congregations were still good, and that the old ones were not dead. Some few weeks since two of their friends this special effort, so that the revivals, examinations, coming among them to help in the good work undertaken. With the many demands on the energy of the Mayors of Sydney the people of the town congregation realised how good of her to them that afternoon, and on their behalf he wished Harry every success in the many social and public she had to perform in her high position in the which he had no doubt would some day not far dis-

A little girl named Daisy Foote, on behalf of the committee, stepped upon the platform and presented Harrie with a beautiful hand bouquet of flowers, tied with streams of white satin ribbon.

The resolution was seconded by Mr. Borshman, a member of the board of directors, and was carried by acclamation.

The hall was tastefully decorated, and when treated with the drapings of the shells, which were artistically arranged in art muslins, presented an attractive scene, one that was much admired, and reflected credit on the ladies who had charge of the decorating and arrangement.

on Saturday as the bulky shaggy red dog snatched the Association's medal. With a good light wind at his back, and just enough to fan away the smoke, some last shooting was done, the conditions being 400 kneeling, 500 yards prone. The results were as follows:

Hon. Secretary Street 21, 32-63; J. Johnston, 61; M. E. 303 J, West, 28, 33-61; A. Hoyle, 29, D. M. 304, 27, 32-50. M.H. rifles were used with exception.

The first competition by members of the Katoomba Civilian Rifle Club in a new series of prize shoots took place on Saturday last, the conditions being seven shots at 500 and 600 yards, the best score out of three to count. Handicap limit, 60 or less. The possible was made by G. Crawshaw yards. The following are the principal scores:

THE CASE OF MR. ALBERT OGDEN

(Reported for Parramatta "Times.")

Within co-ces of Parramatta our reporter directed to the residence of Mr. Albert Ogdens he had heard had something to tell of suffering and serious sickness avoided. Mr. Og physique and sturdy health, who has long been employed as a warder in the Government service, of his own words, "Till I was stationed at Hay I had a day's sickness in my life."

"What happened to you then?"
"I commenced to suffer from insomnia. I could not sleep; so what I would I had continuous wakeless nights. My nervous system was over-

"You do not look like a man easily upset," Ogden said. "What do you think was the cause of this melody?"

"My duties make my hours of rest irregular. I am pretty used to that. It was the continuous, terrible heat of the town of Hay—that has made me feel like this."

"Did you go to a doctor or try any preparations?"

"No; I am very glad I did not. I had been using Clements Tonic and what it had done for me."

"And how did it affect you?"

"It commenced to do good at once. I found sleep—despite the torrid temperature that even the bedding hot to the touch—gradually turned to me. My nervous troubles slowly away, and very soon, after two or three blows was my old self again. You can understand why I was so glad to hear that J. C. had been cured."

"And have you been well ever since?"

"Yes; that is seven years ago, and I have had any return of the old trouble, because I keep a bottle of Clements Tonic in the house and use one dose taken now and then sufficient to serve my perfect health. In fact, Clements is my doctor, the only doctor I ever had, and I

"It is quite true what my husband interposed Mrs. Ogden; "I am sure he would be alive to-day if it were not for Clements' Torment."
"And I have your permission, Mr. Ogden, to put this testimony public?"
"Certainly; I think it only right, when one is beset as I have, to do all I can to help others who may suffer in the same way."

I, Albert Ogden, of Parramatta, in the colony of New South Wales, do solemnly and sincerely swear that I have carefully read the annexed document consisting of three folios and consecutively numbered from one to three, and that it contains and is a true and faithful account of the illness and cure by Clements Tonic, as therein contained. My full permission to publish the same.

unless the further discussion should show improvement, the result, though a foregone conclusion, will hardly be reached without loss of what would most fitly mark a historical occasion.

Except for one or two passages of doubtful relevancy or taste, the brief address of the Premier was all that it should have been. It was unnecessary to connect the duration of the destiny of the Ministry with the progress of federation.

A reminiscence of that kind inevitably brings up the dealings of the Ministry with federation, only a year ago, and it is hardly modest in the Premier to claim any peculiar merit to his Government for discharging a duty imposed at last conscientiously upon the Ministry; for the portion which is found to be lacking in substance of the speech was better than those doubtful excursions. Mr. Reid passed from a full acknowledgment of the ability and the conscientiousness with which the federal campaign had been conducted on both sides to the declaration that all parties having appeared to the tribunal, the electors of the country, they had now secured the popular verdict, and it was for the House accordingly to take the further steps contemplated in order to put that decision into legislative form. The increase in the majority in favour of federation from 5000 in 1895 to 25,000 in 1898, he ascribed, not only to the improvements made in the constitution by the Premier, but to the facilities given for a free vote. It had been the intention of the Government to bring about the decision of the country upon the genuineness of this vote, but speaking from his experience of the electoral machinery of the colony, he was satisfied no great abuse had arisen, and whatever might have taken place could not reasonably be attributed to the Government. He said, for a defence of the Federal Constitution or of the vote of the people. They were there in pursuance of the decision of the electors and of the provisions of the Enabling Act to debate the Constitution of the country.

He stated that this would be done without lengthy debate or the revival of the conflict now decided, and that all would unite in the work of making the Commonwealth that was to be a blessing to the people of Australia.

Mr. Barton naturally followed. He felt that the House could do nothing else but pass an Address, for otherwise it would set at defiance the will of the constituencies, more than once expressed. He, too, deprecated a party complexion to the debate, and recorded his enthusiastic approval of the policy of the Imperial Government in regard to the Transvaal.

Mr. Deane, the Premier, Minister for Foreign Affairs, left for St. Petersburg, to attend the Congress of the League of Nations.

Electoral reform in Belgium is being accomplished with much difficulty and under dangerous conditions. A cabinet was yesterday issued by the Belgian Government, consisting of representatives of the opposing parties in the Lower House appointed to consider the Government's Electoral Bill, had proposed against the measure, so that everything now hangs in the balance.

It will be remembered that the greatest disturbance that has ever occurred in Brussels since Belgium was made an independent kingdom in 1830 took place when this bill was introduced. A few days later a riot broke out in the streets, and the House of Representatives, where also actual violence was offered to Ministers and their supporters. The excitement has been intense, and the struggle has been represented as one of the fiercest in the history of Belgium. The Government Bill, which has been passed by the Chamber of Deputies, is a measure of great importance, and it is expected that it will be passed by the Senate also.
